WITNESS REFUSES TO ANSWER QUESTIONS

Deposition Halted As Witness Refuses To Tell of Life

The task of taking the deposition of Mrs. Euroda Forde Stearns Willette by Garrett W. McEnerney was resumed in the law library in the court house last Tuesday. The "mystery" woman was arranged in fine garmens which was in striking contrast to her appearance at the other hearings. A perk little hat adorned her shapely head, while a rich gown of silk set off her beautiful figure. A pair of high heel shoes incased her well formed foot. Though fifty three years old she still shows traces of her former beauty. Her large snappy black eyes aquiline and shapely nose, the beauty lines of her face and firm chin are evidences of the comely woman she was in the days of her youth. Today she is still attractive.

That Mrs. Willette will be the target of the Flood heirs in the forthcoming suit to break th will of the late James L. Flood is evidenced by the questions asked by McEnerney .

On Tuesday she was carried back to the days of 1894 and 1896, the time after leaving school. She took her time to answer the questions and in many instances evaded direct questions and parried with the merciless gruelling of McEnerney. Her personal attorney Maxwell McNutt was present to aid whenever she was too closely cornered by the doughty white haired attorney. Attorney A. Grady was also at the hearing representing Mrs. Gavin, the alleged daughter of the late capitalist. He containually objected to questions put to the witness by the questioner.

The fireworks were started by McEnerney when he introduced a certified copy of a breach of promise suit filed by Mrs. Willette in the Alameda superior court Febrhary 17, 1917, against A. C. Hass. He presented this to Mrs. Willette and asked her severa direct questions concerning the suit.

"I will answer no questions in regards to the breach of promise suit," Mrs. Willette snapped, "and that is final."

McEnerney then introduced a part of the suit which told of the marriage contract between Haas and Mrs. Willette. He asked her how she had become unmarried between her spiritual wedding to Stearne in 1893 and 1916.

"That affair has nothing to do with this case," Mrs. Willette stated.

When McEnerney said that the unmarriage had to do with the case, Mrs. Willette retorted, "I would like to know what you are trying to plow up in this matter."

"What do you think I could possibly plow up?" McEnerney replied.

Maxwell McNutt, Mrs. Willette's attorney, then advised the woman not to answer the questions and leave it up to the court to rule on the matter.

Refuses Answer

McEnerney then asked, "Were you a married or unmarried woman May 3, 1926?"

"I am not going to answer," Mrs. Willette replied.

Then McEnerney sought to ascertain whether or not Mrs. Willette was married May 23, 1921, the day before she married Willette. Again he was met with a refusal to answer.

When the snow-haired attorney sought to ascertain whether or not she had told Willette of her past history, Mrs. Willette asked, "What is your motive in bringing up this history?"

McEnerney replied it was not dishonorable in telling him, and O'Grady registered an objection on the ground that it was suggestive argument and hearsay.

"Did you think it was bigamy?" Mrs. Willette asked the attorney.

Again Refuses

"Did you think so?" McEnerney counter-queried.

"No," was Mrs. Willette's reply.

A photographic copy of Mrs Willettes' application for marriage license in Alameda was then introduced. It stated that she had been divorced from her ex-husband. When McEnerney queried her on this statement the woman once again refused to answer.

Again McEnerney sought to ascertain whether or not the "mystery" woman had told Willette of her past history.

O'Grady interrupted with a statement that a "spiritual marriage could not be classified as a legal marriage." It appeared as if Mrs. Gavin's counsel would attack this.

When McEnerney again pressed his question, Mrs. Willette replied, "I am not going to discuss my private affairs with anyone." Then she maintained a silence for twenty minutes.

Finally O'Grady told her t either answer yes or no to the question and proceed with the deposition, and Mrs. Willette replied, "Silence is Golden."

At the close of the session McEnerney pulled uot his wallet and witness fees of $18. On receiving the money she promptly handed it back to the giver saying that she was entitled to $4 more and McEnerney pulled out his wall and handed her the missing sum with profuse apologies.

The hearing will again take place on next Monday. The main case has been set for trial for May 19, but in the slow way in which the deposition is proceeding it probably will be many months before the celebrated suit gets to the jury.

QUARANTINE COUNTY NOT NECESSARY

Vegetable Growers To Be Saved Loss of Crops

Following an examination of the crops of the county which are subject to the attacks of the Australian weevel, the State Board of Agriculture has decided that it would be unwise to quarantine the county. A few specimens were found, but not in sufficient numbers to make an absolute quarantine necessary.

The matter was referred to County Horticultural Commissioner A. W. Tate, Jr., and he will take measures to prevent the spread of the pest within the county. The weavel preys on a large number of vegetable crops and the quarantine of all of these crops in the county would have worked a great hardship upon the farmers.

In regard to planting tomatoes, one of the crops affected. Tate stated yesterday that persons should have no hesitation in planting vines. The fruit of the tomato is not a carrier of the pest, he stated, as it only preys on the vines.

Contributions for Flood Sufferers Continue Here

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Investigating recent mysterious nocturnal noises in the garret of his hotel, C. W. Miller, Hanford hotelman, discovered that they proceeded from a nest of young owls, white, fuzzy and large eyed, lately hatched. The mother owl was away when the nestlings were captured, put in a box with a coarse screen in front, and placed near the nest. The wise old owl, mindful of her duty to provide for her young, proceeded to forage for food and the first night after the birds were in captivity the parent owls laid ten squirrels in front of the cage, the second and third nights twenty each, and on the fourth night twelve squirrels were brought in through the skylight and laid before the box containing the three young owls. Miller supplied the young birds with their regular rations and they are already beginning to feather. He believes that the mother has supplied evidence that the owl, of this variety, is a friend of the farmer in the removing of squirrels and will later turn the young ones loose to catch squirrels for themselves.

Giles S. Caldwell of Oakland, has been officially recognized as the outstanding hero of 1926. Before the assembled student body of the University of California, he was awarded the Red Cross medal that once each year goes to the man performing the most singular feat in behalf of mankind. According to the citation, Caldwell and a companion, Frank Perry, were at Stinson Beach on March 27, 1926. They heard screams for help from two girls who had ventured too far into the surf. Plunging into the water, the two swam out to the scene. Caldwell fought his way to the shore through a treacherous surf with one of the girls, at the same time successfully directing Perry in bringing in the other. The girls were Jennie and Dorothy Walker of San Francisco. Dorothy was revived through first aid methods by Caldwell. He was unable to restore life to Jennie.

Articles of incorporation of the Pacific Water Company, a $3,000,000 San Francisco corporation, were filed last week with Frank C. Jordan, secretary of state. The Citrus Realty Company, a $1,000,000 Los Angeles concern, also filed its papers with Jordan.

E. L. Oleson, horticultural inspector for the West Riverside district, is the leader of a boys' horticultural club whose project is to grow trees from seeds. Much interest is being shown in the district in tree planting, both for ornamentals and for windbreaks.

Traver, "ghost city" of San Joaquin valley, a thriving mart of a great grain-shipping district on the Southern Pacific in early days, resounded with life again on April 24, when native sons and daughters from all sections of California "came home." Each spring former Traver residents journey back to renew old-time acquaintances.

Concrete is being poured for the foundations of the new Lucerne Hotel at Lucerne, on the east shore of Clear Lake, the townsite of the Clear Lake Beach Company. A unit of 100 rooms is to be built this year, with further additions to be made later. The cost of the entire building is estimated by Palmer & Becker, the owners, at $650,000.

The city trustees of Manteca held a special meeting this week to discuss the advisibility of purchasing the Manteca water works, an offer having been made to the city through Attorney Guard Darrah at a price of $50,000. This offer was said to be $3,500 less than a previous offer made, although the water company claims to have made many improvements since that time.

The first of the location surveys for the Stockton deep water channel and harbor project are to begin within the next week. Major J. A. Dorst, army engineer from the office of District Engineer C. S. Ridley, San Francisco, arrived to take acitve charge of the work. Location surveys, said Major Dorst, should be completed by October 1. Two field crews of eight men each will be placed on the work.

Actual work toward improvement of Stockton's aviation field began last week. The field, located on Sharp's Lane, about five miles from the center of Stockton, will be ready for use and will be dedicated on May 7, when fifty planes fly here from the second annual aeronautical conference to be held in San Francisco, May 6. The field comprises over 180 acres and is now being graded, marked, fenced and provided with runways and indicators.

Claude Smiley, 21, a ranch laborer, sustained a narrow escape from death last week when a mowing machine blade sliced off a portion of his scalp as he lay asleep in the weeds near the Davis agricultural college farm. W. P. Hodgeson of Davis was driving a tractor to which was hitched the mower and did not see the prostrate man until after the blade struck him. The injured man was rushed to the emergency hospital at Sacramento where he was treated.

Over 1,000 automobiles are entering California through the Yuma-Imperial valley gateway each week, according to figures made public by inspection officers stationed at Fort Yuma bridge. The record showed that cars entering the state during March was 4025. The inspectors state that traffic has been heavier this month than during March and it is predicted that with large numbers of Arizona residents going to the coast for the summer, the present figures will be doubled during May, June and July. According to figures available here, motor travel into California over the Lee and Bankhead highways at Yuma is heavier than the combined travel to the state over the Sunkist route at Blythe and the Old Trails highway at Needles.

Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, who visited Siskiyou county last year, has recently purchased the Wooley ranch near Somes Bar, where he will spend his summer vacations. There is now under way a log lodge. It is hewn from Siskiyou county trees.

A new textile mill is being prepared for business at Corcoran which will have as its principal output cords for auto tires. The company has taken over the old Corcoran sugar mill property and made an approximate investment of $170,000 in equipment and machinery.

Constructed of timbers, some of them freighted overland by team and others hewn from sugar pine drift wood washed down the San Joaquin river during a freshet in the '50s, the rambling early-day one-story mansion of Mrs. George W. Mordecai, Sr., pioneer Madera county resident, was destroyed by a fire last week, supposedly due to a defective flue.

A modern $100,000 branch of the Bank of Italy shortly will grace one of the most historic sites in Marin county, the ground once occupied by the original adobe county courthouse at San Rafael.

Vulcanite, or ebonite, is a dark brown or black form of India rubber. Its hardness is due to the presence of more sulphur than soft rubber contains, and to the fact that it is "vulcanized" at a high temperature. It is used for the mouthpieces of pipes, for combs, for screw-stoppers in bottles, and largely as an insulator in electrical instruments.

FAMOUS MINING STRIKES

By THOMAS E. STEWARD

Search for New Mining Methods

THE government's study of the Mesabi iron district ends with 1902 and gives the shipments in that year as 13,329,953 tons of ore. Seemingly the author considered this a tremendous figure, perhaps one that would not easily be surpassed. Yet in the years of the World war Minnesota shipped as high as 45,000,000 tons of ore in one year, and duplicated that record in 1923. The iron ranges of the entire Lake Superior district, including Wisconsin and Michigan, have shipped an aggregate of 67,000,000 tons in a single year.

This is the increase of a mining industry that began in 1892 with the modest shipment of 4,245 tons from the Mesabi range, jumped to 4,275,000 tons in 1907, to 7,809,000 tons in 1900, and, as has been pointed out, to 13,329,000 in 1902, 10 years after its opening.

Notwithstanding the immense amounts of ore that have been taken from the iron mines of Minnesota, hundreds of millions of tons of high-grade ore remain.

Estimates look forward to the exhaustion of the high-grade ore supply in something like 30 years.

Meanwhile the mines experiment station at the University of Minnesota is bending all of its energies to the task of finding methods for "beneficiating" low-grade ores so that they may profitably be shipped. One method has been developed that makes it perfectly possible to use the rocklike "magnetite" ores of the eastern range, but the method is expensive and can be used only in years when the price of ore is so high that these mines can be operated at a profit. The state of Minnesota is now appropriating something like $20,000 a year for use in experiments looking to the separation of iron from low-grade ores by a roasting or "metallizing" process that could be carried on near the spot where the ore was mined. This will be important if it is developed because most of the smelters using this ore are far away, at Chicago, Gary, Cleveland, Toledo, or elsewhere. Cost of transporting the ore is great. The rich ores, some of them containing from 60 to 65 per cent in actual iron, can always be shipped, but from 45 per cent iron on down to 25 per cent iron, the ores are so lean that the shipper is paying an inordinate amount of freight on mere waste material that must be thrown away at the other end.

If the Minnesota School of Mines experiment station succeeds in accomplishing the method of "metallizing" it will add millions of dollars to the wealth that state will derive from taxes and will indefinitely prolong Minnesota's mining industry. Estimates place the supply of low-grade ores on the iron range at many billions of tons.

Spanish Strike in Arizona

THE region now known as the State of Arizona was a remote mountain area in the northern section of Spain's American possessions back in the Eighteenth century. As early as 1660 Spain had sent expeditions into the districts now known as California, New Mexico and Arizona, and some gold and silver had been found. In 1738 a remarkable deposit of silver nuggets was discovered in Arizona, but it was exhausted in three years.

The celebrated and rich silver strike in the Santa Rita mountains of Arizona, made in the year 1769, has been described in an old Spanish work entitled "Apostolic Labours of the Society of Jesus." It says:

"In the year 1769 a region of virgin silver was discovered on the frontier of the Apaches, a tribe exceedingly warlike and brave, at the place called Arizona.

"News of such surprising wealth attracted a vast multitude to the spot. At a depth of a few yards masses of fine silver of a globular form and 25 to 50 pounds in weight were found, and one lump, discovered by a government official, weighed 3,500 pounds. Many persons amassed huge fortunes, while others, equally diligent in the search, found nothing."

Under the pretense that he was acting for the safety of the treasure that had been discovered, the captain general of the district sent troops who escorted the silver train bearing this wealth to his own headquarters. When he had his hands on it he seized it in the name of the crown, claiming that it had been found on crown property. The discoverers had little liking for this procedure and appealed to the Mexican authorities at Guadalajara, but they were unwilling to take action and referred the whole matter to the royal court at Madrid. Seven years dragged by before an order came from the Spanish crown, and even then it dashed the hopes of the miners. The crown claimed the entire property and whatever it had produced.

This discouraging situation, together with repeated attacks by hostile Indians, finally put an end to mining in the Santa Rita mountains and no further important mining was done in Arizona until about 1879. Then came the silver strike at the town of Tombstone, so named, it is said, because of the frequent demand that arose for something to decorate a grave.

To Clean Aluminum

Save the energy you would ordinarily use in cleaning darkened aluminum—save yourself the expense, too, small as it is, of an aluminum polish. For the simplest way to take off dark stains on aluminum is to cook applesauce or tomatoe in the dish. The acid of the food will brighten the aluminum and it has absolutely no effect which is in any way harmful upon the food, nor does it in any way change the nutritive value of the food. —Chicago Journal.

Help The Red Cross Help

WITH the area of the floods in the southern states growing daily, and thousands rendered homeless by the devastation, the call upon the Red Cross becomes hourly greater and more insistent. The Red Cross is the only organization of broad enough scope and sufficient backing to meet an emergency of this kind, and it is meeting the emergency with every available resource.

Even the Red Cross, however, is limited to the extent that its finances are limited, and relying as it does for its resources upon the generosity of the American people, it comes now before the nation with one of the most urgent appeals since the days of the great war.

We of California can look back twenty-one years to the days of the great fire and remember the lines of refugees waiting for food or clothing and the camps hurriedly built in parks and vacant lots to accomodate the homeless. This was one city. Imagine this condition now spreading to several states. But here the homeless are not only without food and shelter, but are actually marooned on little islands in a great sea of mud and water. Thousands are drowned and other thousands are starving. All means of transportation are either entirely inoperative or greatly hampered. These are a few of the difficulties that the Red Cross is facing in its efforts to alleviate the sufferings of the people in the flooded areas. These are the conditions that your contribution to the Red Cross today will help to relieve.

Being A Radical

IN some of the ancient countries we learn of outlaws for whom there was no protection, they roamed around at pleasure, but were game for anyone who could overpower, capture or kill them. The possession of certain ideas would seem to place the possessor in very similar predicament in certain parts of the United States. In Massachusetts, for instance, two men are convicted of murder. The evidence against them would not convict a man of petty larceny, but both men were known to be radicals and both were convicted.

These men were nominally on trial for murder, but were in reality being tried for holding radical views. The murder charge could never in fairness have been made to hold, but of the two men being radically inclined there was no doubt. Hence the conviction.

We picture Justice as the blind goddess. Perhaps it would be well occasionally to remove the blindfold and allow the light to penetrate to the dark recesses of judicial proceedure.

Bathing the Baby After the Tub Runs Dry

TWO objects of immediate importance; Protection of the Colorado river control project has three of the Imperial Valley; generation of cheap power for Arizona, Nevada and California; production of additional supply of domestic water for the Los Angeles territory.

The first of these objectives needs immediate action. The second—more and cheaper hydro-electric power—will be of chief immediate benefit to Ariozna. California can get along very well without the Colorado river power. The third obecjtive—more water for Los Angeles pots and bath tubs—is not needed to supply the present wants. This winter's heavy rains have so replenished reservoirs above and below ground throughout the Southwest that both the cities and the farmers will have enough water for at least two years. And the present wet year, if precedent is of value, will probably be succeeded by three or four similar rainy seasons.

But another cycle of dry years is coming just as certainly as the country will be inundated by political hogwash every fourth year. NOW is the time to get ready. It will be too late to bathe the baby after the water has run out of the tub—May Sunset.

BOY SCOUTS TO AID GOODWILL SALVAGE DRIVE

Every home has many discarded and outgrown garments, worn shoes, broken and discarded furniture, stoves, newspapers, magazines cluttering up closets, basements or attics and doing no one any good.

The good will industries can use these cast-off articles to give employment to old and crippled people who cannot find any other employment.

The good will industries is a non-profit association organized by public-spirited men for just that purpose.

The week of May 7 to May 14 is Good Will Salvage Week, and the Boy Scouts are going to help by asking people to save these waste articles, and have them bundled and ready on the sidewalk when the truck calls on Saturday, May 14, 1927.

The co-operation of the people of Redwood City is asked by the Boy Scouts in the following ways:

1. Accumulate usable and repairable clothing and articles of all kinds, old newspapers, magazines, etc.

2. Bundle each class of article in some way so it can be conveniently loaded and unloaded.

3. Pile all articles near the curb not later than 9 a. m., Saturday, May 14. (If raining, place perishable articles on porch.)

The articles will be picked up by a truck manned by Boy Souts on the above date.

Remember the day, Saturday, Mary 14.

We're Goin' to Gran'ma's!

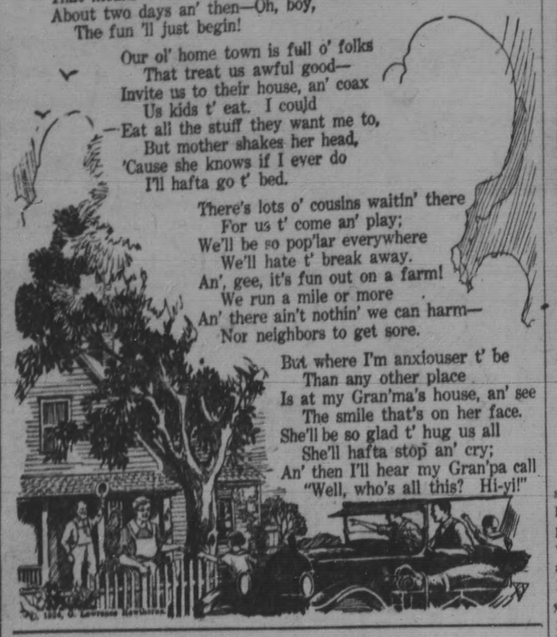
By O. Lawrence Hawthorne

It won't be long buffore we go
To Gran'ma's house again;
An' say, I guess you oughter know
We'll have a big time then!
They live way back in Illinois;
That means we'll drive it in
About two days an' then—Oh, boy,
The fun 'll just begin!

Our ol' home town is full o' folks
That treat us awful good—
Invite us to their house, an' coax
Us kids t' eat. I could
Eat all the stuff they want me to,
But mother shakes her head,
'Cause she knows if I ever do
I'll hafta go t' bed.

There's lots o' cousins waitin' there
For us t' come an' play;
We'll be so pop'lar everywhere
We'll hate t' break away.
An', gee, it's fun out on a farm!
We run a mile or more
An' there ain't nothin' we can harm—
Nor neighbors to get sore.

But where I'm anxiouser t' be
Than any other place
Is at my Gran'ma's house, an' see
The smile that's on her face.
She'll be so glad t' hug us all
She'll hafta stop an' cry;
An' then I'll hear my Gran'pa call
"Well, who's all this? Hi-yi!"



Students and Faculty Working for Pageant

Using "co-operation" as their slogan, students and faculty of Sequoia Union High School are bending every effort to make the remaining week between now and May 14 count for the most in order to present a successful pantomime production of the "Pageant of the Seal."

Stage crew work under the management of LeRoy Stransky is being finished up in first-class style, according to opinions voiced by students and faculty members. A circular piece of beaver board extending thirty-two feet into the air has been erected by the crew. Upon this, a stereoptican machine will be focused showing the newly adopted school seal in all its colors. The many powerful lights will obtain their electricity from a huge dynamo that was loaned to the local institution for the pageant.

Six episodes, a prologue, a flower interlude and an apilogue will make up the hour and a half of entertainment. Various sections of the pageant are being rehearsed every night after school. One of the big features will be the dancing. Mrs. A. L. Robertson, dancing coach at Sequoia, has been busy for the past month instructing solo dancers in their technique. Each of the ten spirits evolved in the episodes will have a dancer to represent the part. In addition to this, the Spirit of Sequoia will be represented in dance. All but two of the soloists have had previous experience as dancers. A large number are second year dancing students.

The Spirits of Wisdom and Leadership will be presented in the first episode of the production. Chief Sequoyah, the Cherokee Indian, after whom the school is named, will be shown as he devised the Cherokee alphabet. Braves and Indian maidens complete the cast of the initial episode.

Padres of the early missions give the theme for the two spirits, Faith and Endeavor, in the second of the six parts. Two parties meet on El Camino Real and tell stories of the early happenings in this locality. It is in this scene that a fat, dirty Mexican tells of the finding the hut of Las Pulgas, Spanish for fleas, so named because of it being infested with these insects. The man enters the hovel and becomes covered with small pests. He comes running out, yelling "Las Pulgas! Las Pulgas!"

Don Louis Arguello receives notification of his appointment as Governor of California in episode three of the Spanish Dons. Spanish dancing and the unfolding of the Spirit of Glory are the high lights of this episode.

Former well-nown owners of the Sequoia campus are remembered in the "Estate Episode," part four. When the present mechanical art building was opened as a stable for the blooded horses of Moses Hopkins, one of the biggest social events of the time was held. Society leaders from San Francisco to Monterey were invited to the all-night party. This event will occupy one scene of this episode. A sheriff's sale of the campus at which the parcel was purchased for $250 by Horace Hawes is shown in another scene while the planting of some rare flowers will be depicted in the remaining scene. Episode four and the flower interlude that follows evolve the Spirit of Beauty.

The Idealism shown by the first board of trustees is shown in the fifth part. How the Native Sons dedicated the building will be illustrated. This episode is known as the "Trustees' Episode."

Sequoia students evolve three spirits in the sixth episode, which is their own. The Spirit of Joy is produced from the singing and orchestral numbers that will be presented.

One of the school's biggest aims—that of Citizenship—will be presented in the epilogue. The colors, red, white and blue, of the background of the seal, suggests this spirit. The other ten spirits are typified by the rays of the rising sun.

The town of Redwood City has been divided up into sections and various organizations of the school are canvassing the city. Adults tickets sell at fifty cents each, and may be purchased from most any high school student.

CLARA BOW, ESTHER RALSTON CO-STARRED

Clara Bow and Esther Ralston in The Paramount Picture 'Children of Divorce'

A Frank Lloyd Production, "Children of Divorce" Unites Two Beauties

Clara Bow and Esther Ralston are co-starred in Frank Lloyd's sensational Paramount picture, "Children of Divorce," which arrives at the Sequoia Theatre next Monday and Tuesday, May 9 and 10. As Kitty Flanders and Jean Waddington, both players are said to do their very best work.

Kitty and Jean first meet in a convent as "children of divorce." All four parents have gone their own separate ways. The tragic mistake her father and mother have made with their lives makes a deep impression on Jean and she resolves never to marry until she is sure the right man presents himself.

Ten years later, Ted Larrabee, a handsome youth whom Jean loves dearly, proposes. Wishing to test him out, Jean withholds her answer until he ha actually made good. Realizing her motives, Ted engages in practice as an engineer. Everything goes along smoothly until the eventful afternoon on which Ted enters his office to find it transformed into a bedlam of jazz by Kitty and her wild friends. After the first hour, Ted forgets his vows and again becomes one of the gang. Next morning he finds Kitty in his room and a wedding ring on her hand. They are now husband and wife!

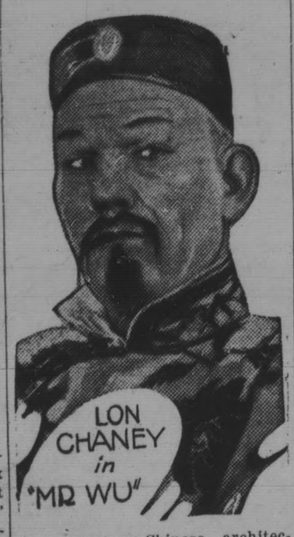
ORIENT RECREATED FOR CHANEY FILM

Spectacular Sets Feature of "Mr. Wu," Directed by William Nigh



Duplicating Chinese architecture, Chinese decorations, and other details of creating an exact duplicate of the mysterious Orient proved one of the strangest tasks of research ever encountered at a studio, when the spectacular settings for "Mr. Wu," coming to the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday and Thursay, May 11 and 12, were created.

The experts in charge of the work, before they could study Chinese architecture, had to study Chinese religion. This was necessary because every detail of Chinese building design hinges on the religion and superstitions of its people.

All architecture in China is on a triangular basis, representing the trinity of the Chinese religion, and the dragon, symbol of immortality, reaching toward the earth, is the basic principle of its decoration.

Chinese roofs always curl up at the eaves—that descending evil spirits may be caught on these chutes and turned upward into the air again. Strange walls, known as "spirit walls," are built on a certain formula to foil evil spirits.

William Nigh, who directed the new production at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, and Chaney, the star, passed weeks in research with the technical department before the settings were constructed, and much of Chaney's delineation of the uncanny Chinese avenger in the dramatic story was gleaned from the same study.

Chaney plays a powerful mandarin of uncanny knowledge and power, and the cast includes Louise Dresser, Renee Adoree, Ralph Forbes, Gertrude Olmsted, Anna May Wong, Mrs. Wong Wing, Holmes Herbert, Claude King and other noted players.

MOVING PICTURES OF GERMS LATEST SCIENTIFIC DEVELOPMENT

The time may not be far distant when you can drop in a movie theatre, and instead of viewing the antics of your favorite film comedian, watch a thrilling moving picture of a white corpuscle attack and consume a disease germ which has entered the blood stream. These new micro-films, as they are called, are made possible by an invention known as a micro-cinematrograph—a combination of a motion picture camera and a powerful microscope.

While the micro-cinematograph is not a new invention, having been in existence for about thirty years, scientists and educators have just begun to recognize the tremendous possibilities as an educational factor, in that it can be used to depict upon the screen, actually demonstrate, scientific facts which heretofore could only be presented by means of the printed or spoken word.

For instance, there is the common household problem of spoiled food. It is easy for a scientist to explain why food spoils; but it is not so easy for the housewife, unacquainted with the simplest bacteriological phenomona, to visualize the process. With the micro-film, however, this can be shown just what happens. She can see the micro-organisms thriving and multiplying in food which is not kept in a well-iced ice box. She can see how the proper temperature of an ice box prevents this bacterial growth, and keeps pure, fresh and wholesome. Any woman who had observed the bacterial action which takes place in a bottle of milk not properly iced, would ever be without ice.

Standardization in Service

THE manufacturing of equipment for the Bell System was one of the earliest, and is now among the outstanding examples of the standardization and quantity production which are distinctive characteristics of American industry.

Quantity production for the nation-wide Bell System makes it possible to put into every item of telephone equipment better material and better workmanship, at a lower cost to the telephone user, than could otherwise be done. But the dominant advantage of uniform manufacturing, under standard specifications, lies in the improvement of the service.

Every transmitter in the System is designed to work in harmony with every receiver all over the land and to co-ordinate with all the complicated equipment and lines behind. All can function at full efficiency for they are designed and manufactured for that purpose. Standardization, not only of equipment but of operating methods, is the only basis upon which it would be possible adequately to meet America's need of a nation-wide, universal telephone service.

Only ICE does this!

The circulating air in an ice-cooled refrigerator picks up odors and impurities from your food and carries them to the ice chamber, where they are absorbed by the melting ice and carried off down the drain pipe.

WORK TO START ON BAYSHORE ROAD

The state highway commission has been impertuned to begin work on the bayshore highway from the outskirts of Redwood City near Middlefield road to Palo Alto. The route is level and could be constructed without much cost. The property owners along the course have nearly all given rights of way to the state for this proposed thoroughfare and it is but fair to them that the work should be started as soon as possible. In some cases property owners have given property valued as high as $25,000 for this road as a right of way.

The gasoline tax bill has been passed by the legislature whereby sufficient funds may be raised to pay for all construction work. The bill raises the tax from two to three cents a gallon.

The congestion is so great on the state highway that it is almost impossible to travel on it during business hours. Another road is imperative.

MOTHER OF MRS. M'NEIL DIES IN P. A.

Mrs. Minnie Brier Gibson of Palo Alto, mother of Mrs. L. N. McNeil of this city, passed away at her home in the former city Monday morning. Mrs. Gibson had been in ill health for some time, but her death was a severe shock to her family and friends.

Mrs. Gibson is survived by her husband, S. C. Gibson of Palo Alto, and three sons and two daughters. The sons are Bruce S. Gibson, president of the San Mateo Chamber of commerce; J. R. Gibson of the same city; and Paul P. Gibson, former district attorney of Humboldt county. The daughters are Mrs. McNeil of this city and Mrs. Daisy May Butler of San Francisco.

Funeral services were held in Palo Alto on Tuesday.

C. OF C. MEMBERS HEAR OF NEW INDUSTRY HEAR

Members of the Chamber of Commerce were given interesting information Monday concerning the latest addition to Redwood City industries, the manufacture of bubblestone. Thomas J. Hampton, president of the Monterey Bubblestone Co., was the chief speaker at the luncheon meeting of the chamber of commerce and spoke on the product he plans to manufacture at a plant now in process of construction here.

The bubblestone is a product of cement and sand. It is a non-conductor of heat and is very resistive to stress or cracking, and is said to be unusually suitable as a building material. The plant for the manufacture is located on the land of the Redwood Harbor Company, just south of the Pacific Portland Cement Company's plant.

IT WAS HIGH NOON; WEDDING, VERY HIGH

The marriage was at high noon, and the party was "all up in the air." The event was the wedding of D. A. Templeton and Miss Dorothy Lee Burke, both of San Francisco. Templeton is a commercial aviator and chose as the scene of his nuptials a spot several thousand feet above Redwood City.

After securing a license here, the party consisting of the bride and groom-to-be, the best man, Ralph Shelton of San Mateo and the brides-maid, Miss Mary Hunt of San Francisco and Rev. Aubry H. Clark, pastor of the First Methodist church here climbed into Purcell's five-passenger machine and headed for the sky.

When sufficiently high to make the groom feel at ease, the "Sky Pilot" took charge and piloted the party through the the intricacies of the wedding service.

LOCAL CHILD IS GIVEN HEALTH BY S. F. HOSPITAL

Due to the care he received from doctors and nurses at the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children in San Francisco, little Richard Dean War, grandson of Mrs. Charles War of this city, is now able to walk, a privilege he has not enjoyed since he was born. The little fellow is now five years old, having spent his fifth birthday in the Shriners' Hospital.

More than four years ago when Richard was only seven months old he contracted a case of pneumonia. He recovered from this malady, but it left in its wake an affection of the hip joints and a serious condition of the bones. From that time on the child was a helpless cripple.

Hearing of the Shriners' hospital the parents of the little sufferer took him to San Francisco, but found that the hospital was filled to capacity. The doctors, however, took up the case and he was given treatments under which he improved. After a year of waiting for a chance to get into the hospital the time finally came when he could be placed in the hospital and under the direct and personal care of the most eminent child specialists in the country. Here Richard with hundreds of other little tots with weak and twisted bones and misshapen bodies, was given the skillful care which in time conquered his handicap. He can now walk with crutches, and for a short distance without them. Soon he will be strong and healthy as a boy of five should be and will be able to discard his crutches entirely. On Tuesday of this week little Richard, accompanied by his mother, returned to his home in King City.

The Shriners' Hospital is maintained for the care of any crippled children, and the care given there is not surpassed in any institution of its kind in the world.

H. C. FINKLER RECEIVES SUPREME COURT HONORS

H. C. Finkler of this city received the congratulations of the California State Supreme Court this week upon the completion of his 49th year as secretary to that body. Finkler was appointed by Justice A. L. Rhodes, succeeding his father, Carl Finkler, who had held the position for 10 years. He has held it ever since.

When presented with the congratulations of the court, Finkler attributed his good health to the fresh air of Redwood City and to his favorite sports, sawing wood and riding a bicycle.

NAMES OF ROADS TO BE CHANGED

Action, which it is hoped, will eventually result in the formation of a second highway along this side of the peninsula was taken on Monday when County Engineer George Kneese appeared before the board of supervisors and asked that the names of certain streets be changed. The streets loncerned are Brittan avenue west of San Carlos, Ashley avenue and Foothill boulevard, west of Redwood City. Kneese asked that these be changed to Alameda de las Pulgas.

Kneese explained that these roads and streets form links in the proposed extension of the Alameda de las Pulgas, and that placing all the sections of this road under one name would assist in the preliminary work of connecting the whole.

When completed the Alameda de las Pulgas will form a broad highway from Belmont to the county line on the south and will connect with roads in Santa Clara county paralleling the state highway as far as Los Altos. It is expected that when completed the road will be continued on to San Francisco and will form another highway along the peninsula.

Redistricting May Be Considered For This County

Although the petition for a writ of mandate to compel the board of supervisors of this county to redistrict the county's supervisorial districts was denied by Judge Buck, it is not unlikely that some action may be taken by the board itself in the near future. The petition was denied by Judge Buck not on the ground that the request was unjustified, but because he claimed that the petition was not sufficient.

There has been much friction in certain sections of the county because of the present inequalities in representation due to the difference of population of the various townships. Several attempts have been made to have the county redistricted, but none have been successful.

Chairman Poole last Monday, however, advised that the board give the matter its serious consideration. It is likely that the board may hold an executive meeting before long when the matter will be discussed.

REFUGEES FROM CHINAS HARE RED CROSS FUND

American refuges, evacuated from Hankow and other danger points in the Yangtze Valley to Shangai, are being assisted by American Red Cross funds. In response to an urgent appeal from the American Consul General at Shanghai, transmitted through the Department of State, $10,000 was made available for relief. The cable stated:

"First two ship loads of refugees from Nanking arrive here tomorrow. Nanking Consul reports that many are destitute and will require assistance. Reports from Hankow and elsewhere in Yangtze valley state that rapid evacuation to Shanghai is taking place. This creates emergency situation with several hundred Americans in actual want and needing food and shelter who have no present means of succor. MONDAY GETS PERMIT TO HAVE PILES DRIVEN

As practically all property owners in the block bounded by Main, Webster and Washington streets and Broadway have expressed themselves as favoring the creation of a new street bisecting the block parallel to Main street, proceedings were started by City Attorney Mansfield on Monday for the creation of an improvement district to proceed with the project.

The construction of the proposed street will necessitate the purchase of property owned by John W. Munday, and on which he was planning to erect a building. This caused a slight hitch in the proceedings. Munday appeared before the board Monday evening and requested a building permit that he might proceed with the driving of piles for the foundation of the proposed building.

In as much as the piles will be of no value if the street is put through the permit was refused by the board of trustees. Munday was represented by Attorney John Machado of San Jose. Machado explained to the board that the contract for the driving of the piles had already been signed and that the piles, concrete ones, had been made and could not be moved without a very great expense. Meanwhile the pile driver is on the property and the contractor is asking $25 a day for keeping the machine in idleness. The matter, was therefore, laid over till Tuesday evening when the property owners could meet and decide what they wished to do in the matter.

On Tuesday practically all the property owners of the block were present as well as the contractor, Munday and Attorney Machado. Machado placed Munday's case before the board and the contractor explained the mechanical difficulties of waiting or moving the piles.

The piles as they stand represent an investment of $1850. The driving of the piles will be $300 more, or a total of $2150. Either of these amounts would eventually be bourne by the property owners when the street is put through. The question before them as explained by Mayor Beeger was whether they would guarantee Munday the expense of having the pile driver removed and then brought here again and the piles driven in the event that something unforseen occurs that might block the street procedure, or whether they would have Munday granted a permit to drive the piles and pay the $300 extra on the purchase price of the land.

Among the property owners who addressed the board were Dan Flynn, Carl Muller, Bud Thorpe, L. Deluchi, Miss Hansen, Mrs. C. Graves, John Poole and G. B. Merrill. All favored granting the permit. This was accordingly done by Building Inspector Drathman upon the advice from the board.

KITE STRING WRECKS PHONE

A bit of cotton string, with a kite on one end and a boy on the other, recently placed a number of telephones near Visalia out of order. Kites have a way of getting entangled with telephone and electric power wires and, when wet with rain or fog, of causing short circuits. In this particular instance the wet string of a Visalia youngster's kite linked a telephone line and power line together with disastrous results. The telephones were brought to town for repairs, but the kite was ruined forever.

Small boys usually remember that it is best to fly kites away from the telephone wires and avoided the telephone trouble which occasionally inconveniences their elders—trouble which is repaired as quickly as the telephone men can get to the scene of the kite flying. Telephone men have becomes expert at removing kites from lines as the wind is adept at entangling these bits of flying paper with the wires.

SHEEP RAISERS GRANT ED FUNDS

County assistance in the war of the sheepmen against coyotes and other preditory animals of the hills was secured on Monday. Sheepmen from all parts of the county gathered Monday morning at the meeting of the board of supervisors to request that $1500 be appropriated by the county. This amount will be equaled by the State Biological Survey under the Department of Agriculture and men form the Biological Survey will be sent here to make war on the preditory animals.

R. K. Stewart of the State Biological Survey and W. P. Wayne of the California Wool Growers Association were present and urged the action before the board. Stewart explained the methods used in poisoning coyotes. Every provision is made, he stated, to protect deer and other game animals and all poison is taken up during the hunting season to protect dogs. In sections where dogs are used by ranchers or others, traps are used for the coyotes.

Wayne showed by means of a map the number of counties which are co-operating with the state in the destruction of the bob cats and coyotes. The greater portion of the state is now carrying on this work, and the reduction in the number of predacious animals is resulting in greatly increased flocks of sheep.

Sheepmen from Pescadero, Portola, Pomponio and other parts of the county adressed the board. It was stated by some raisers that there are at present more 15000 sheep in this county and that if proper protection is given against the enemies of the sheep that the number would be increased to 30,000 by next year.

Supervisor Hickey addressed the board in favor of granting the aid sought by the sheep raisers. A motion seting aside the required amount was made by Supervisor Thompson and passed unanimously. The work of coyote control will begin on July 1.

Jacob Kreiss is constructing a bridge across the creek from J. C. Hers paint shop to Bement & Wilson's blacksmith shop on Bridge street.

The railroad has constructed something like a half a mile of track over the strip of land given the company for a right-of-way by N. J. Brittan, Johnston and others, between San Carlos and Redwood City.

Robert Brown, the contractor, is putting on an addition to the Robinson mansion recently purchased by W. H. Talbot that cost $2000. Mr. Talbot contemplates making other improvements of a more permanent character in the near future.

Edwin Fish, manager of the Peninsula Lighting Company, has let a contract to Leon Bean for the erection of a two-story building on First street. The stipulated price for the contract is for $3000. The lower story of the building will contain the Lighting Company's offices and the upper story will be occupied by the engineer. Ground will be broken today for the structure.

William Paper, who conduct a bootblack stand, has played the role of a Good Samaritan this week. When the arch between Main and Bridge streets was taken down, a quantity of nails was scattered over the street, to the constant danger of passing horses. Mr. Paper applied himself industriously until the last nail had been picked up, gathering in all about two cigar baxes full.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock an interesting bicycle race will be held. The start will be from Belmont and the finish at Finger's bridge. The following riders and the handicap given: Al Becker, scratch; James Hansen, ten seconds; C. Hammerson, fifteen seconds; F. Barry, twenty-five seconds; Hall Ross, forty-five seconds; C. RAVENSWOOD SCHOOL WINS WILD FLOWER PRIZE

The Ravenswood School received the Mary Percy Westphall cup for an exhibit of wild flowers at the California Spring Blossom and Wild Flower Show in San Francisco last week. The cup is a silver trophy and stands about seven inches high. It is awarded to the school exhibing the best selection of wild flowers. The flowers were placed in Ravenswood by the pupils of the school. It is planned by the school to enter an exhibit at the show next year which will be even better than this one and it is hoped that winning the cup will stimulate interest among a larger number of the pupils.

Fossil Plants Found to Be Very Much Alike

The weird forests of the Coal age that grew in the widely separated swamps of what are now the states of Rhode Island and Missouri were strikingly alike in the plants that composed them, according to Dr. Eda M. Round, writing in the Botanical Gazette. Doctor Round has made a close comparison of fossil plant remains from the sandstones and shales of these regions, and states that more than 50 per cent of the plant species of the two localities were identical. None of the species that grew there those many millions of years ago survives into the present time, but the nearest relatives of some of them are now represented by ferns, club-mosses and scouring rushes or horsetails. Two classes of plants, in some way the most interesting of all, are now totally extinct. These were a group of trailing or vine-like plants related to the ferns, and another group with leaves like ferns but bearing seeds, which are unknown among modern ferns.

The Soft Answer

Supporting the hollowness of London's "smart" night life, we are able to relate an incident reflecting upon its spontaneity.

It concerns a substantial, middle-aged man who was given a seat beside the dancing space in one of these dens of rather pale iniquity. During the show one of the vivacious young women skipped out of line and, by way of making things livelier, pulled loose the man's tie and playfully rumpled his hair. When he showed signs of being annoyed, her expression of gaiety relaxed for a moment.—London Tit-Bits.

Radio at Night

According to a suggestion made by Heaviside and Kennelly, there is a highly conductive layer of atmosphere at an altitude of 50 or 60 miles from which radio signals are reflected at night. During daytime they do not travel so high because of the ionization of the atmosphere due to sunlight.

IN DAYS OF OUR FOREFATHERS

Women Prepared Their Own Medicines

The wise pioneer women learned to gather, in woods and fields, the remedies the Indians used. From the rafters of colonial houses, hung great bunches of dried roots and herbs. From these, in times of sickness, the busy mother brewed simple and powerful remedies.

From roots and herbs, Lydia E. Pinkham, a descendant of these sturdy pioneers, made her Vegetable Compound. The beneficial effects of this dependable medicine are vouched for by hundreds of women.

Mrs. Wm. Kraft of 2838 Vinewood Ave., Detroit, Mich., saw a Pinkham advertisement in the "News" one day and made up her mind that she would give the Compound a trial. At that time she was very weak. "After the first bottle," she writes, "I began to feel better and like a new woman after taking six bottles. I recommend it to others and always keep a bottle in the house."

Mrs. Gust Green of 401 Lincoln Park Boulevard, Rockford, Illinois, found herself in a condition similar to that of Mrs. Kraft. "I was weak and run-down," she writes, "but the Vegetable Compound has helped me and I feel better now. I recommend it to all women who need more strength."

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Floods and Tornadoes Work Havoc in Middle West—Atrocity in Mexico.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WIND and water wrought havoc throughout the Middle West during the week. Scores of lives were lost, many thousands of persons were driven from their homes, and immense damage, as yet impossible to estimate, was done to property. All down the lower Mississippi valley the river levees were giving way and the waters, increased by heavy rains and driven by high winds, were rushing through towns and submerging farm lands. Refugees by the hundreds were gathered, often unsheltered, on higher ground awaiting succor and in some of their camps, notable along the St. Francis river in Arkansas, measles, whooping cough and mumps broke out.

In southwestern Kansas the rivers were fed by cloudbursts and rose to record heights, inundating vast areas and isolating many towns. The Neosho, Verdigris and Cottonwood rivers were out of their banks. In the region surrounding Kansas City the high waters of the Missouri and Kansas rivers caused extended floods.

Monday and Tuesday a series of tornadoes swept across north Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, parts of Kansas and through central Illinois. About fifty lives were lost in these storms, twenty-two of the fatalities being in Illinois, and hundreds were injured. Property losses in towns and on farms were severe.

Relief for the flood and storm sufferers was swiftly started by the Red Cross and by state and municipal governments. The War department supplied tents and the soldiers and medical officers of the National Guard in the states affected gave efficient aid.

MEXICAN bandits broke all records for atrocity in that country when they attacked a passenger train near La Barca in the state of Jalisco. The cars were filled with people returning from the Holy week holidays at Lake Chapala and a guard of fifty soldiers was aboard. The bandits, numbering about 500, derailed the train, killed all the soldiers with gun fire, slaughtered many of the passengers and then locked the cars, saturated them with gasoline and set them afire. The scene that followed was horrible beyond description. Scores of persons, mostly women and children, were burned to death and many of those who broke out of the cars were shot down or clubbed mercilessly. It was believed that more than 100 were killed, in addition to the military guard. Only the passengers who were in two steel Pullman cars escaped death or injury. Among the victims was Donna Refugio Obregon de Ponce de Leon, eldest daughter of General Obregon, former president of Mexico. It was believed the bandits were under the command of a chieftain named Jesus Barajas.

President Calles issued a statement charging that the massacre was perpetrated by rebel bandits under the leadership of Catholic priests and that the latter "received instructions from the episcopate." He said the military escort put up a three-hour resistance against the attacking band, which was headed personally by the priests Vega, Pedraza, and Angulo, the lawyer Loza, who was a member of the League for Defense of Religious Liberty, and a bandit known as "El Catorce" (Number 14).

MODERATES of the Chinese Nationalist party formally established their capital in Nanking, with Gen. Chiang Kai-shek in control, and the split between them and the communists at Hankow seemed definite. The moderates impeached the Hankow group, and the latter in turn deposed Chiang as commander in chief and ordered his arrest and punishment; Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, formerly called the "Christian general," was named to succeed Chiang. The moderate leader continued his efforts to drive the Red labor unions out of business in Shanghai, Canton and elsewhere. His new commissioner of foreign affairs, Quo Tai-chi, stated his belief that the "real Kuomingtangists," including Mrs. Sun Yat-sen, Tan Yen-kai, Sun Fo, and others, shortly will desert Hankow for Nanking. He does not expect armed clashes between the Nanking and Hankow factions and declares General Chiang will immediately continue the campaign against Gen. Chang Tso-lin and Gen. Chang Chung-chang along the Tientsin-Pukow railway.

Respecting the future attitude of the Nanking government toward the powers, Quo declared: "There is absolutely no change in the Kuomintang party's program respecting the foreigners. We will treat those nations as equal which accord Nationalist China equal treatment."

The sudden shift of Nationalist headquarters from Hankow to Nanking was rather embarrassing to the powers, which were gathering war vessels at the former place apparently for the purpose of enforcing their demand for reparation for the Nanking outrages. The British press in Shanghai thought the forming of the new government was a scheme to avoid responsibility for the Nanking incident.

Marshal Chang in Peking announced that examination of partly burned papers found when the Russian military attache's office was raided revealed a document from the Third International at Moscow giving directions for the massacre of all foreigners in order to bring about intervention in China as a preliminary to a world revolution. The Peking government sent word to Moscow that the raid was not on the embassy proper but on other buildings in the compound; that while diplomats enjoyed special immunities, they did not have the right to carry on illegal practices.

In carrying out the defense program of the legation quarter in Peking, with consent of the Chinese authorities, it was found the gates of the Russian compound were locked. American marines scaled the wall and forced the gates, after which the guards of the other powers entered and took control of the wall.

Northern troops still were holding Pukow, on the Yangtse opposite Nanking, and firing between the two cities was carried on daily. Several times the northerners fired at American and British vessels that were passing and the latter returned the fire effectively.

It was reported in Shanghai that Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, formerly overlord of Shanghai and five rich provinces, and who recently defeated the Nationalists along the Yangtse, had joined that party and had been made defense commissioner of northern Kiangsu, the chief salt revenue area.

JAPAN is experiencing a financial crisis which already has brought about the temporary suspension of several banks, although the Bank of Japan is aiding the smaller financial institutions. The Bank of Formosa also was in trouble, following the failure of the great exporting and importing house of Suzuki, and the cabinet planned to assist it. But the privy council did not approve so Premier Wakutsuki and his ministers resigned. Baron Tanaka was made premier and formed what was agreed upon as a strong cabinet, himself holding the portfolio of foreign minister. The public felt reassured but the financial troubles were not over, for on Wednesday the Fifteenth bank, one of the largest in the country, suspended for three weeks.

IN THE course of the week's desultory fighting between the government forces and the liberals in Nicaragua the latter several times fired on detachments of American marines which were guarding railways. The marines, who suffered no casualties, dispersed the attackers with machine gun fire, killing a few of them. It is the impression in Managua that the rebels are making attacks on the marines in order to force the American government to take charge of the country. Henry L. Stimson, investigator for President Coolidge, is holding conferences with various officials and business men, and there is a good chance that what he recommends will amount to active intervention for the restoration and preservation of order.

FEDERAL DISTRICT JUDGE G. M. BOURQUIN at San Francisco has ruled that the seizure of the steamer Federalship on the high seas, the arrest of its captain and crew and the confiscation of its million dollar cargo of liquor by coast guard vessels was illegal and a "sheer aggression and trespass" by the United States authorities, contrary to treaty. He also declared that, "a decent respect for the opinions of mankind, national honor, harmonious relations between nations and avoidance of war requires that the contracts represented by treaties shall be scrupulously observed, held inviolate and in good faith, precisely performed—requires that treaties shall not be reduced to 'mere scraps of paper.'"

WHEN the "White House spokesman," in reply to rumors that Secretary of State Kellogg was to resign and was to be succeeded by Secretary of Commerce Hoover, declared that Mr. Kellogg had no intention of quitting his post and that if he did, Mr. Hoover would not be given it, a lot of people assumed that this was meant as a slap at Mr. Hoover. To counteract this impression a warm tribute to the secretary of commerce was made public at the White House. It explained that President Coolidge rather assumed in denying published reports that Mr. Hoover was slated to succeed Mr. Kellogg that it was unnecessary to make mention of his high regard for Mr. Hoover's abilities. The President recognizes that Mr. Hoover's reputation is so well established both in this country and abroad that he doubts very much if he would be able to shake it even if he wished to do so. Mr. Hoover has achieved big things, the President realizes, and the public everywhere has confidence in him. The President regards Mr. Hoover as possessing the ability to fill any position in the cabinet which he might be willing to accept.

STOCKHOLDERS of the United States Steel corporation at the annual meeting ratified the proposal of the directors by which the outstanding share capital will be increased from $868,583,600 par value to $1,071,904,000. Of this $203,321,000 in common stock will be passed along to stockholders in the form of a 40 per cent stock dividend.

Actually the stock dividends, the first distribution of the kind in the corporation's history, is worth to the stockholders $294,815,450, which is the market value of the additional shares on a "when issued" basis. The entire outstanding share capital of the corporation will have a market value when issued of approximately $1,671,000,000. The new stock will be placed on the same 7 per cent annual dividend basis as the original common shares.

GOV. AL SMITH'S eagerly awaited reply to Charles C. Marshall's article in the Atlantic Monthly is printed in that magazine and is about what his admirers hoped for. He stands, as "an American Catholic," for complete separation of church and state. His answer embodies a creed that recognizes no power in his church superior to the Constitution of the United States and holds all churches equal before the law and the public school "as one of the cornerstones of American liberty."

UPON motion of defense counsel, Judge Raymond at Detroit granted an order of mistrial in the million-dollar libel suit of Aaron Sapiro against Henry Ford. The reason for this action was that Mrs. Cora Hoffman, one of the jurors, had granted an interview the substance of which appeared in the Detroit Times. Judge Raymond expressly cleared Mrs. Hoffman of allegations made in a series of affidavits by Ford detectives and other employees that she had discussed a $10,000 bribe with one "Kid" Miller, and that she had wrongly stated she was a qualified juror, and asserted disbelief that Sapiro had indulged in any misconduct, as asserted in the affidavits.

Poland Worrying Over Ruler After Pilsudski

Speculation as to what will happen to Poland when Joseph Pilsudski relinquishes his hold on the republic have become rife with reports that the health of the marshal is anything but encouraging, and that he is a very tired man.

Since the Pilsudski coup d'etat of last May the marshal has held the country in the palm of his hand, but more and more of late there have been rumblings of growing opposition in various groups that aim to be prepared to assume power in event of "an emergency."

Lack of harmony among the followers of Pilsudski is pronounced. He is supported by a majority of the country, but the support is purely personal. He has made no attempt to create other ties than sentiment for himself.

Pilsudski is a man of today. Tomorrow may take care of itself.

The lack of consistency of the Pilsudski cabinet is partly explained by the lack of unity among its members, as royalist land-owners collaborate with difficulty with the Socialist leaders. These dissensions often are manifest by the activities of individual members in open contradiction to the policy of the cabinet as a whole.

Roman Dmowski, who has been endeavoring to form a strong organization which would be the nucleus of a government system after the end of the present dictatorship, hopes to step into Pilsudski's shoes, and is working toward that end.

NAILHEAD TRIM IS POPULAR; NOVEL EFFECT IN SPORTS WEA

FOR a change, why not trim the new frocks or coat with nailheads instead of with beads? Nailheads are newer and they are smartly adaptable to daytime modes.

Gold nailheads in two sizes dotted here and there add greatly to the attractiveness of a navy-blue crepe or satin frock. They are equally as effective as a border for the hemline of the coat.

It is an artful motif of nailheads which supplies a most fetching decorative note to the gown in the picture. The conventional flower worked on one side of the blouse is a popular idea this season. When done in steel also, many felt hats being dec... with them in all-over patterning.

nailheads as is the motif in the picture, it carries a convincing style message. Slippers of neutral tone gray kid were carefully selected for wear with this costume of dark-green crepe, thus carrying out a color scheme of gray, steel and green for the ensemble.

As one considers this handsome costume comes the thought of how charmingly it could be developed in the popular black and white. The flower motif would be very effective worked in large white porcelain beads or in tiny pearls. White kidskin slippers scrolled with an applique of black or with fancy designed inlays, or if you please, black slippers piped with white would "complete the picture."

Speaking of nailhead trimming, sometimes an entire blouse is starred with gold or silver nailheads. Then, too, nailheads are used to embellish fancy sleeves. In the same class with nailhead effects is that of the tiny "pocketbook clamps" which are pressed about the edges of cuffs, collars, belts and pockets. A dress of dark crepe or satin thus trimmed may handsomely add a gilded or silvered belt.

Selwood of Sleepy Cat

"All right. That's settled. Carpy," continued Selwood, "thinks this place is getting too noisy for you, Dave. All these squatters coming in, and the clatter they make. He says you'll do better out under the pines a few miles up river, and I've got things arranged to get you up there today. The weather's settled now, and I've got time to move you—what do you say we start today?"

"I know where I'm comfortable, better than Carpy does. I'll stay here."

Selwood, with patience, continued to dwell on the advantages of country life. But the old soldier resisted all blandishments, and in the end his patience gave out first. "Look here, John," he exclaimed with a snap of disgust, "you're beating round the bush, like these crooked Sleepy Cat lawyers. I know what's going on, if I am flat on my back. The Vigilantes are ready to move. Where did you get the idea I was afraid of Vigilantes?"

Selwood shrugged his shoulders. "Where did you get the idea I thought you were?"

"Well, you're trying to ship me out of town—you and Carpy. Now, John, I'm not going—that's flat—not for all the Vigilantes in the Rocky mountains."

As Tracy uttered his declaration, Bill Pardaloe, like a huge camel, stuck his head within the tent. Selwood, paying no further attention to the intruder, vainly tried in low tones to persuade Tracy it would be sheer folly to remain where he was. He reminded Tracy of his helpless condition and of what his obstinacy might mean; he begged him to consider his—Selwood's—feelings, if there were none of his own to move him. The old gambler proved adamant to every consideration, and, not only that, he grew more and more set against all proposals. "John," he exclaimed, raging like a grizzly at bay, "are you running, too?"

"You know very well, Dave, there's a heap of difference between a well man's running and a wounded man's being carried out of the way of a fight."

"You going to stay?"

"There's no reason why I shouldn't."

"And fight?"

"Nobody will miss me if I do fight."

"If you stay, there's just one answer—you get killed," said Tracy. "Dash you, I know you better than you know yourself. Now, John, listen." The old man, gray, grizzled, unshaven, hollow-eyed, but stern, his iron-gray hair falling in a great mat over his wrinkled forehead, sat bolt upright on his cot. He tore open the breast of the coarse shirt he wore—the only upper garment—and pointed to an American flag, tattooed over his heart.

Selwood sat with the eyes of youth silently fixed on his country's emblem. Bill Pardaloe stepped closer in, craned his neck forward, pulled off his tattered hat to get still closer, and peered dumbly at the tattooed breast.

Tracy spoke to Selwood. "John, I don't say I've never done anything to disgrace it," he went on, "but I fought for that old flag nigh three year. I tramped down the Peninsula with McClellan, and double-quicked back again; I stood, best I could, against Pickett at Gettysburg, with George Meade; I went up against the Bloody Angle in the Wilderness with Grant. It don't mean a continental to a lot of folks nowadays, but it means something to me yet. Does anything you've ever seen me do, John, look to you as if I'd run from a blamed parcel of Vigilante crooks? I'll admit I'm no saint, I'm no preacher—"

"You're preaching right now, Dave."

"Then, d—n it, let me preach—but the worst I've ever done was to invite a man to back his luck against mine. I've played crooked with crooks, I'll admit it, but no honest man can say I've ever stacked a deck against him—I took my chances, same as he took his.

"Now, a parcel of Vigilantes threaten to hang me—I know, same's if you'd told me. I left the best of my life in health and strength down on the Jim river for this old flag—that's why I can't put up a man's fight today—" He bared his right breast. There was a gap in it in which you could lay a hen's egg. "A Johnny Reb shell took that lung, John—" He tore open, with fierceness, the shirt sleeve of his left arm—"a minie ball splintered that arm, John—you know it's no good. It wasn't that fight with Frank Sanger that did for me. I was done for in the Wilderness and came out with no health to earn a living, and here I am—and not sorry for it. Well, they can hang me. But it'll be done after I'm dead. And then," he muttered with satisfaction, "the blamed skunks have got to hang the old flag with me. I tell you again, I don't say I've never done nothing to disgrace it. I don't say I'm proud of winding up as a gambler. But things is as they is. And if this is my last stand—why, it's all right."

He reached his hand out toward the tent pole. "Gi' me my gun, Bill." With Selwood sitting in silence, Pardaloe lifted from the nail on which it hung by the scabbard an old Colt's army revolver. Tracy took it almost affectionately. "Leave this with me," he said, falling back on his frowsy pillow. "Bring me a couple dozen cartridges—that'll be all I need."

Selwood smiled. "More'n you'll need, Dave," he said quite undisturbed.

Selwood continued to smile; not mirthfully—seriously, rather. He just studied the mumbling old gladiator—half toothless, laid low after many a stout fight—stiffened in joint, frayed in nerve, caressing the old gun with a shaking hand, so enfeebled he could with difficulty hold up his head, and with only the gray eyes flashing the old fire as he hurled defiance at his enemies—it was not a cheerful picture! No home to die in; no woman to be tender with his pain or patient with his irascibility; no child's kiss to close the weary day—just a human derelict, cast by the storm and wave of civilization on its outermost shore—such was Dave Tracy.

"What you looking at me that way for, John?" demanded the old gambler peevishly.

"Nothing, Dave, nothing—just thinking. I'll be back again." He rose as he spoke. Pardaloe peered—as if in farewell—at Tracy and pushed his way outside. "See here," exclaimed Tracy, detaining Selwood. "You 'n' me's been partners, ain't we? You say you're stayin'. You talk about my getting killed—how d'y' suppose I'd feel if you got killed?"

Selwood laughed lightly. "It's what's comin' to both of us, I guess Dave."

"Carry me up the hill to the hall, you and Pardaloe; I'll stay and you go. I'd a blamed sight better be defending the hall than you. I'm no loss to anybody on earth—"

"Neither am I, Dave."

"What about the girl that brings me soup two and three times a week? What's she bringing it to me for? What did she bring me an apple for today? Because she thinks a lot of me—or you?"

Selwood winced. "Because she's kind-hearted," he said irritably. "Don't talk nonsense." But he was red in the face.

Tracy followed up sharply. "It's you, Selwood—not me—you. I don't have to be told what a girl's thinking when she'll set right there where you're settin' now, and listen as long as I'll talk about you."

Selwood shrugged his shoulders. "You're wasting your breath to talk about me." He flung out of the tent in no very pleasant frame of mind.

The valley, the river, and the flats were in shadow when Selwood stepped outside. Turning up street, his eyes fell on the hill, where the front windows of the big gambling-house burned in the glow of the sunset. Busy with his thoughts, he reached the barn, spoke to Scott, who stood in the doorway, directed him to bring Pardaloe with him as soon as it was dark, and, making sure that all ordered was in readiness, Selwood walked on up the hill.

CHAPTER XI

The River Bridge.

It was two hours yet to opening time. He unlocked the front door of the hall, crossed the room to his office, unlocked the door, entered, locked it behind him, sat down at his desk, unlocked it, and pulled open a drawer in which he kept his stock of ammunition. Besides the boxes of cartridges and cleaning implements there were in it two cartridge belts and two Colt's revolvers. There was still daylight enough for his purpose, and Selwood, taking first his own gun and in turn the two guns in the drawer, began the task of taking down, cleaning, and assembling the three.

It gave him plenty of time to think. Warning had come—his defiance had answered it—at least, for John Selwood. He had been told what to expect; he had said how he should meet it; there remained only the question of how far twelve cartridges loaded into two guns expressly for this occasion would carry him after the opening shot.

It was too much to hope that he should live to fire them all, and he fell to speculating on how many loaded cartridges would be found in the two guns when they picked him up. It enraged him to think of being cornered by Vigilantes; and escape now was so easy—and always there was Christie in the background of his thinking. But his word had been passed—whether foolishly or not, was beside the question. He had told the "real estate boomers" where they would find him.

In the street he heard a beating of hoofs and a chorus of whooping yells from horsemen heading down-town on a drunken spree. Carpy's words came back to him: "It's Saturday night. All the Calabasas horse-thieves ride into town for a spree. They'll all get in. But they won't many get out."

He did not know the men—he only knew that in their company a skeleton horseman, astride a skeleton steed, galloped noiselessly ahead; that Death that night would slink, an invisible guest, in with these men as they lined up at the bar; unbidden, would sit that night with them at their tables and stake their evil lives against the caprice of frontier fate—as, indeed, he had already, for that night, staked John Selwood's.

He picked up, last of his job, the cartridge belt. It was too dark to see, but it was easy to feel with the fingers of one hand for the cartridges in the box, while in the other he held the belt and felt for the empty spaces to slip the brass slugs into place. And with the thrift of Robinson Crusoe, he emptied a handful of cartridges into his trousers pocket, rose, buckled the belt about his waist. As he did this, he heard a loud knock at the outer door. It startled him; then he remembered that he had told Scott to bring Pardaloe to him as soon as it was dark.

He walked to the front door; the two men were there. Bob Scott bared his tobacco-stained teeth as he smiled his report to Selwood. "They've put men on all the roads out of town except the upper river road. I guess the idea is to stop all the birds that try to fly the coop tonight. And they figured no one from Calabasas would be leaving town till pretty late, anyway." Selwood asked whether the team and horses were ready. Pardaloe had come straight from the barn. His eyes, set rather harder than usual with the prospects of the night, appeared closer, if possible, together, and glowed with a deeper light; while if suspicion could more completely characterize his manner, it seemed now heightened, in view of coming events. "They're hitched, John," he said darkly, "chewin' their bits in two and tearin' up the planks right now in the gangway."

"I suppose you know," said Selwood, addressing both men, "I'm going to take Dave Tracy out of town. He's my partner; I'll never see him hurt while I'm alive. He refused to go, as you know, Bill," he said to Pardaloe, "and he's bull-headed enough to put up a scuffle rather than be dragged out. No matter. Carpy put a sleepy dose in Tracy's coffee tonight. By this time he should be under; I hope he is. But he's got to go now, whether he drank the coffee or not. I won't see him strung up on a telegraph pole, if I have to kill him to get him out of town."

"How you going to get across the bridge?" asked Pardaloe grimly.

"I'll attend to that. You say the river road isn't guarded, anyway."

"Things Are Fixed," the Barn Boss Half Whispered.

Selwood addressed the words to Scott.

"It wasn't when I rode up from the west bridge. The trail will shake Dave some, but we can get over it if we can get to it."

Big Haynes loomed up out of the darkness. "What's up, boys?" he asked as he walked in and saw the three men in confab.

"We don't know yet," said Selwood. "But I'll be away for two or three hours. There's talk of trying to clean the town up tonight. Skillman is in Medicine Bend, and I leave you in charge of the place here, Haynes. I expect to be back before anything much happens. But if you have to run, get a good start—you're fat."

Haynes, fingering a gun as big as a toy cannon, looked hurt. "Who'm I going to run from, John? You're putting this place in my charge, till you get back?" he asked, to confirm his understanding.

"I am."

"What time'll you be back?"

"If I'm not back by eleven o'clock, don't look for me."

Haynes straightened up. "I'll hold this place against all comers till twelve o'clock," he said composedly. "Give me a couple of good men," he added, nodding significantly toward Pardaloe and Scott, "and I'll hold this place against all the Vigilantes in Sleepy Cat!"

"I need a couple of good men, myself," replied Selwood drily. "I might send up Bull Page!"

Adding only a few details to his injunctions, Selwood, returning to his room, picked up a shot-bag full of loose cartridges, and leaving the place that embraced all his earthly possessions walked rapidly down to the barn, followed by Pardaloe and Scott. As the street door was opened by Selwood, McAlpin rose from the fringe of darkness.

"Things are fixed," the barn boss half whispered, as the three men entered the office. "Two men are watching the back door; they've got a couple ten-gauge guns and plenty of buckshot cartridges—loaded 'em myself—five drams and plenty of buckshot. John Lefever has got six men over at the warehouse, all heeled, and more a-comin'. If they get us, John, they'll know we're here!"

The waiting team, freshly fed and watered, was hitched to the light wagon. Beside the wagon was an extra saddle-horse for Pardaloe; Selwood had mounted up. "John," whispered the barn boss, clasping Selwood's knee as he stood beside his horse, "what's the place to find you, if I need you?"

Selwood hesitated. "We're trying for the south trail up the river, but I doubt we'll ever make it. We'll either be up at the beaver dam, or, more likely, at Calabasas. If you come after me, try Calabasas first."

At a signal from Scott, who took the reins, McAlpin threw open the doors and Scott, with Pardaloe at his side, carrying his redoubtable shotgun, and Selwood on horseback, clattered out of the barn.

Selwood, with a lantern, entered Tracy's tent. The old soldier had drunk his coffee. He lay heavily asleep. Pardaloe, waiting, peered inside. Selwood motioned to him. The wagon was backed close up to the door, and Selwood gathered up Tracy's belongings. Then, at a nod, Pardaloe picked Tracy, bedclothes and all, up in his arms and, with Selwood holding back the fly, carried him out and lifted him into the wagon.

The cot was lashed inside the wagon; the tent was struck and stowed beside it. In less than ten minutes the little calvacade was headed as quietly as the restive horses would let them for the bridge, Pardaloe, his shotgun between his knees, staring into the darkness. Selwood pushed ahead on his horse to try the passage.

He reached the bridge only to be halted by two men, who stepped out of the dark on either side, covering him with shotguns.

Selwood halted his horse. "What is it, boys?"

"Can't cross this bridge."

"Why not?"

"Nobody can cross the bridges tonight without a bridge pass."

"Well, we've got passes—good on all bridges, trails, and boulevards—but they're not the kind of passes we like to use on decent men. We're crossing this bridge tonight, boys, but we're willing to play fair. How many of you are there?" asked Selwood unruffled.

"Plenty to hold this bridge."

"There are just two of you—if there were any more they'd all be poking their guns under a peaceable man's nose. Listen! There are four of us. If you say fight, it's a fight, but you haven't got a ghost of a chance. And you're doing nobody any harm in letting us take a sick man out of the fight uptown tonight. I'm going out over this bridge and coming back, myself, over this bridge inside two hours. I'll give you my word, I'm coming back."

He had talked only long enough to allow Pardaloe to crawl back over Tracy and out of the hind end of the wagon. Selwood told the guards, frankly, just who he was—they laughed at his claim to his identity; he offered to show them the sick man in the wagon—it was all in vain. He talked loud for a few minutes and irritated the guards; touched his horse enough with the spur to keep his feet shuffling, and Scott, trying to quiet his horses, kept them stamping and champing on the bridge planks. But all the while Selwood was making the noises, and all the while the guards stood their ground, his eyes were searching the circle of darkness to his right, where his eye, long practiced, followed a hulking object slinking slowly and noiselessly forward.

Creeping like a huge cat from behind the wagon on to the bridge; pausing for loud words or the impatience of the horses' feet; advancing, step by step, at the champing of their bits and the straining at their harness, Pardaloe crouched in readiness behind the nearer guard waiting only for Selwood to act.

"It's foolishness, boys, to keep poking shotguns into me," protested Selwood. "It would be better for you and better for me if you'd stand back. And any man that calls himself a friend of mine ought to be over TO THE LEFT by this time. If I'm shot I FALL TO THE RIGHT. Man!" he exclaimed, addressing the guard on his left hand, "you're so close I can smell the powder in your cartridge. Well, if we can't cross, we can't. It looks to me as if YOU'RE READY. And I'm ready. Go!"

With a lurch, sudden as thought, Selwood jerked his horse to the right and throwing his lines, keeled from the saddle to the bridge floor. As he did so, the toe of his left boot caught the barrel of the shotgun on that side with a blow that kicked the gun into the guard's stomach. One barrel exploded; the charge went into the air. In falling, Selwood, striking up with his hand the barrel of the second shotgun, threw himself bodily on the right-hand guard. The two men clinched to the ground, and the gambler pulling, in the struggle, the revolver from the breast harness, brought the butt down twice on the fighting guard's head. Pardaloe, who had placed himself, as directed, behind the left guard, butted him violently from behind, above the knees, grabbed both ankles, and as the guard's shotgun went off, threw him with a grunt backward clear over his own head. The man struck sprawling on the plank floor, and Pardaloe was on top of him before he knew what had happened. Selwood's horse reared and plunged at the discharge of the gun, but, fortunately, hit no one under foot. The struggle of the surprised guards was quickly over—neither had a chance against men practiced in encounter.

Selwood was first to speak. "Throw me a piece of rope, Bob," he said, astride his man.

"Don't waste no rope on these birds," growled Pardaloe, "dump 'em into the river!" He was really picking up his yelling victim to follow his own advice when Selwood intervened.

"Hold the man—and tie him," said Selwood, sternly, meantime trussing his own victim. "We may have visitors any minute—work fast."

Scott, and Pardaloe with much grumbling, carried the crestfallen guards, tied and roughly gagged, well into the bushes at the left of the roadway. "Sorry to gag you this way, boys," explained Selwood, leaving them, "but I'll be back by twelve o'clock and turn you loose, if you don't have better luck. Next time stand back out of reach, as I advised you to. Don't expect to stick your shotguns into a man's ribs and not get kicked."

Old Pictures May Be Work of Egyptians

According to a report from South Africa, two men searching for cattle in Rhodesia found some queer-looking pictures painted in a shallow cave under a boulder. They sent photographs of the pictures to Dr. S. P. Impey, a South African authority on rock paintings, who pronounced them specimens of Egyptian art. "There are hundreds of crude bushman paintings in caves all over South Africa," declared Doctor Impey, "but these are clearly of a different technique from anything discovered before. There are 11 figures, apparently minstrels, playing stringed instruments unknown to bushmen. In the cave is a large rock where the artist must have rested, using a long brush to reach the roof. The painted figures wear Egyptian costumes, while bushmen's figures are always unclothed."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Engineer Cressy Praises Tanlac

Fermentation, Bloating, Nervousness and Constipation Relieved. Health Restored. Gains 26 Pounds

"Tanlac did me so much good that I have been boosting it whenever I could," says B. Cressy, 959 Ellis St., San Francisco, a well-known electrical engineer. "Stomach trouble was the seat of my trouble. Whatever I ate did not digest. It would lie in the pit of my stomach and ferment, cause gas that bloated my stomach and pained me. Often this trouble was so bad I could hardly breathe. I was always constipated and lost weight fast. Of course I was nervous and at night I never slept soundly.

"Then a lady advised me to take Tanlac. I did, with wonderful result. It relieved all stomach trouble, gave me an appetite, cleansed my system of constipation and built up my strength. I have gained 26 pounds since taking Tanlac. And never felt better."

Take Tanlac for better health, for strength. First bottle shows amazing results. At your druggist's. Over 40 million bottles sold.

So small that it can be slipped into an overcoat pocket, a portable artificial sunlight generator weighing only two pounds, has been invented by a German scientist. The generator, which resembles a toy phonograph, can be plugged into an ordinary electric light socket. It consists of a little nickel-plated horn fitted to a circular metal case. Inside the horn are two specially prepared carbons, across which passes a spark giving out ultra-violet rays. A person sitting two feet away may have the whole body bathed in the rays.

To Route Busses Over Bridge

The California Transit Company has applied to the State Railroad Commission for a permit to route its busses now going to Los Angeles over the Dumbarton bridge and up the peninsula to San Francisco. These busses now enter the city over ferries at Oakland. By coming up the peninsula a saving in time of thirty minutes may be made. The application is to be heard during the month by the commission. The routing of these stages through Menlo Park and the peninsula is a big thing for this section as thousands of visitors from the sweltering heat of the counties of the San Joaquin valley will come here and no doubt many will locate here. Monday night the local chamber of commerce endorsed the proposition and several of the members agreed to be at the session of the commission on the day of the hearing of the application. A station will be established on Santa Cruz to accommodate those coming from the bay and for the convenience of those wishing to visit the towns on the other side. By this means Oakland will be brought closer to the people of Menlo Park. The benefit of these stages through town cannot be estimated a wonderful development is certain to follow in the wake of these busses. The proposed route is up the Willow road to the Middlefield road through Menlo Park via Ranvenswood avenue, along Railroad avenue to the post office on Santa Cruz avenue. A celebration is to be held by the people here when the first bus arrives which will be some time this summer.

For a Fluffo Pie Crust—Sift together 1½ cups flour and 1¼ teaspoons salt. Mix in 6 tablespoons Fluffo thoroughly. Add water gradually. When dough cleans bowl, chill, and roll on slightly floured board. Bake in very hot oven (500° F.) 10 to 15 minutes. If crust contains filling, reduce temperature to 425° F. after first 10 minutes, and bake 20 to 30 minutes longer according to filling.

Conserve Energy by Act of Hibernation

The members of the American Society of Mammologists have been requested to look into the subject of hibernation with the hope that it might be made use of by humans. The suggestion was made by Vernon Bailey of the United States biological survey. Hibernation is something between sleep and death which progresses until the sleeper's body becomes cold and respiration reaches a scarcely perceptible rate. This condition in some mammals might continue for six months; others awake occasionally to feed from food stored nearby. It is said to be practiced by some of the isolated tribes of northern Russia, where food is scarce and where the winters are so severe that they can do little work. They tuck themselves away and arouse only occasionally to take a little food which is placed nearby. Food in very small quantities suffices, as the hibernators are called upon to use such a trifling amount of energy. It is a matter of record that Nansen, the explorer, while isolated many years ago in the Arctic virtually slept through the entire winter months, arousing himself momentarily from day to day only to eat frozen blubber before drowsing off again.
